The University of Georgia is committed to principles of equal opportunity and affirmative action.
The University of Georgia College of Veterinary Medicine is expanding its efforts to educate young people from diverse backgrounds about opportunities in veterinary medicine while also preparing them for a career in the veterinary profession.

VetCAMP (Veterinary Career Aptitude and Mentoring Program) will house up to 20 high school students on UGA’s campus for seven days. These students will be involved in various activities aimed at: expanding their skills and improving their competitiveness as potential future employees, providing mentorship and helping them experience veterinary medicine as an exciting career path.

This on-site seven day-long summer program will provide opportunities for observation of and participation in the various services in the Veterinary Teaching Hospital, the Poultry Diagnostic and Research Center and the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratories as well as a field trip to the Georgia Aquarium for behind-the-scenes views of the facilities. Other activities include information sessions on: admission requirements, research opportunities, the curriculum, study abroad opportunities, and other underserved specializations in the field of veterinary medicine.
